

Child and Adolescent Health

Why is child and adolescent health important to Iowans?

Overall, Iowa children are in good health — only 2.6% of parents believe their child to be in fair to poor health. The vast majority (97%) are medically insured, with 1 in 5 children insured through either Hawki or Medicaid. More young children are becoming engaged in physical activity on a daily basis.

However, disparities exist. Almost 13% of African-American children have a developmental delay, compared to 3% of non-Hispanic white children. Children in lower income households are more likely to be overweight or obese and more likely to live in a household where one or both parents smoke.

In 2018, 59% of Iowa children received one or more preventive health visits within the previous year. Access to care (medical, dental, and mental health) is of concern. As many as 14% of Iowa children served by Title V Child & Adolescent Health agencies did not have an established medical home, primarily due to a lack of providers, transportation issues, and low reimbursement rates from public insurance. Did you know?

Last year, nearly 115,000 children received preventive health services from 23 Title V Child and Adolescent Health agencies serving all counties in Iowa.

A focus on health equity

Identifying differences in health needs among population groups with low incomes or who have historically had less access, power and privilege is a focus of the Iowa Title V program. Title V Child and Adolescent Health is working with a Health Equity Advisory Committee to engage community voices in assessing needs and program planning, and to change the culture of the Title V program. Title V is working toward a culture of connectedness and collaboration with marginalized communities. Building a culture of understanding that collaboratively serves the needs of the margins best serves the needs of the whole population in Iowa. This is being accomplished by building relationships with local community experts to design and implement services for all children and adolescents living in Iowa.
